"A Whistle in the Hills - A Story of the North Arkansas line in Harrison"

Isaac will present a brief discussion of the general history of the M&A - followed by details about the shop complex, some of the equipment used, and surviving remnants of the old railroad. There will be time for audience questions.

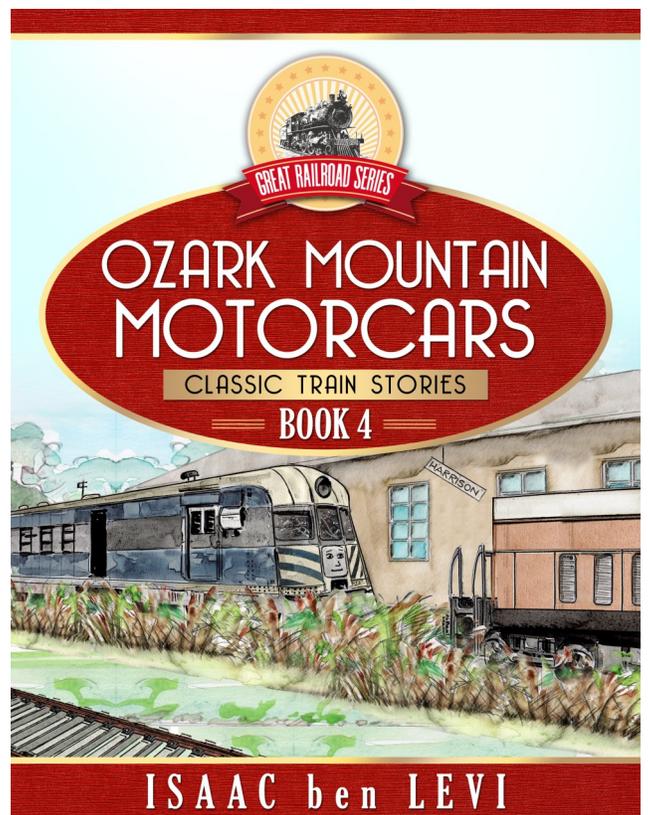

Isaac has always been fascinated with the railroad, and the history of how it brought life to towns across the nation. He is currently a junior in High School and is an encyclopedia of railroad knowledge. His dream is to inspire children of all ages to learn about the impact of trains and, perhaps one day, build a line himself.

When he is not writing, you will find him in the Ozark Mountains enjoying all that life on a homestead provides. His beloved animals, LEGO trains, shooting sports, photography, art, science, survival skills, and reading are among his favorites. His family lives off the grid and off the beaten path.

Isaac is also inventing and experimenting, including building a narrow-gauge tram that he uses to move the firewood from the pile out front to the back door of the homestead. His neighbors like to stop by and see what is new, and even ride the tram cart down the hill.

Visit Isaac's website, where he discusses the history of the railroad and includes videos of interviews with local experts and museum visits. He uses this information to write the "Great Railroad Series." GreatRailroadSeries.com

Coming Soon! Book 4 in the Great Railroad Series!

The Ozark Mountain Railroad has a problem. They need another passenger train, but they can't afford to buy a new one! Then, one of the OMRR's locomotives remembers an old friend of his... a railway motorcar who hasn't turned his wheels in years. But he's for sale, and cheap, too. Join the engines of the Ozark Mountain Railroad as they welcome their new, and for some old, friend, along with some unexpected surprises along the way as the "Blue Geese" become part of the OMRR family! A wholesome bedtime story for kids of all ages!
